

ABSTRACT

There is provided an electronic device capable of device testing by using inexpensive
5 testing devices. The electronic device is comprised of a receiver for receiving signals from a shield line and able to be connected by a serial bus including data lines D+ and D-, and the shield line, and an identification unit connected with the 10 receiver for identifying the received signals, and a testing controller for performing self-tests based on the identification results.